It has been our custom for several seasons to hold a special annual SPRING SALE. The object being to increase our already large business, by offering the GREATEST POSSIBLE INDUCEMENTS, consistent with the SMALLEST LIVING PROFITS.

We are of those who believe it is better to cut a piece of goods a dozen times at a small margin, than to cut it once at a large one. It advertises the business, makes new customers, and keeps old ones, enables us to place larger orders and thus take every advantage of the market.

In order to make this the most popular and successful of all previous sales, we have been obliged to defer it until a later date that usual, in order to secure some SPECIAL INDUCEMENTS not to be had earlier.

Without further preliminary we take pleasure in announcing the continuance of our Annual Spring Sale, which opened on Monday, Apr. 19,

The State Cattle.

REPORT OF THE INSPECTOR OF ANIMAL INDUSTRY—THE ANIMALS ALL AFFECTED WITH TUBERCULOSIS.

209 West 38th Street, New York, April 29th, 1886.

To His Excellency, Frederick Robie, Esq., Governor of Maine:

Dear Sir—Pursuant to an order from Hon. Norman J. Coleman, United States Commissioner of Agriculture, I started on the 19th instant for Orono, Maine, to advise with your State Veterinarian, Dr. Geo. H. Bailey, as to what disposition should be made of the cattle belonging to the State College Farm. Arriving there before the State authorities, I had ample time to study carefully the history and surroundings of the herd.

From G. W. Gowell, Superintendent of farm, I learned that for the past eight or ten years there occurred an occasional death among the cattle, and as nearly as I could judge from his description, these animals were affected with the same disease that prevailed at this examination.

The trouble was evidently a pulmonary one, a more or less persistent cough, irregular or hurried breathing and emaciation being witnessed in all.

I was first led to examine the hygienic surroundings. The barn is a large one and has ample room for the stock. It is well lighted and thoroughly ventilated; the air being surprisingly pure as I entered the building early in the morning. The stalls are kept very clean, as the animals themselves show. The manure is thrown in the basement, but a free current of air prevents any appreciable odor from rising to the stable. The water is from a cistern which being above the level of any stable drainage is pure and wholesome. The feeding is judicious in every sense, and the food, both grain and hay, is of the best quality.

From the history of previous cases, and upon examining a few of the cattle that presented the most marked symptoms, I was able to diagnose the disease as Tuberculosis beyond any reasonable doubt.

Upon the arrival of the State authorities it was decided to destroy some of the worst cases for post-mortem purposes. The animals thus selected were some that State Veterinarian Bailey had previously examined and placed by themselves in the horse barn. I will refer to some of them by name and give the lesions presented. Cow Pansy presented numerous miliary tubercles throughout the left lung, and in the right were masses of tubercular deposits of various sizes, situated chiefly near the apex of the lung. These masses had become cheesy or calcareous.

Hyacinth presented smaller aggregations of grayish white nodules throughout the substance of both lungs.

Flossy—Both lungs affected; in the right lung near its centre was noticed a large abscess, due to softening and breaking down of tubercular deposits. The left humero-radial or elbow joint was considerably enlarged and had given rise to lameness during the past few months. The knee joint of the same leg was first involved, but now appeared healthy. The synovial membrane and extremities of the humerus and radius were in a diseased condition, but presented no calcareous deposits or appearances of rheumatoid arthritis. The prepectoral and brachial lymphatic glands were found to contain much cheesy and calcareous matter.

Cows Edith, Crummie, Mildred, Blanche, and others showed extensive granulations on the costal and pulmonary pleurae, which in some instances firmly united the lungs to the ribs.

Helen Hart, in addition to similar lesions of the thoracic organs, revealed well developed tubercles in the udder. Some of these had broken down and their contents was discharged into the milk sinuses, and tainted the milk—a fact that had been observed by those in charge for some days.

It does not seem necessary for me to [illegible] lesions found in the visceral cavities [illegible], except to remark that other [illegible] were frequently involved [illegible], etc. The [illegible] conditions of [illegible] and other digestive disorders being here most marked.

Out of the forty-seven (47) head destroyed, all (four or five calves were not examined, but were killed because of being the offspring of diseased dams, and having occupied the infected barn,) presented symptoms which, as you probably are aware, were accurately interpreted in every instance, even where but very small and deep-seated portions of lung tissue were involved.

The uniformity of these symptoms and pathological lesions must prove to all thinking minds (whether little or nothing is known of the appearances of the disease in question) that there existed in each individual member of the herd one and the same disease.

That this disease is both hereditary and contagious seems also patent from the facts that calves scarcely one month old were plainly affected, and that those animals recently bought and placed with the diseased cattle show upon post-mortem examination the initial lesions of this malady.

In answer to those who contend that this disease was caused by improper feeding, or lack of sufficient ventilation and exercise, it is only necessary to remind you that tuberculosis, like small pox and similar diseases, is a specific malady; one that can only be spread by coming in contact in some way with its special and determined infecting agent.

The assertions that cotton seed meal had anything to do with the origin, or spread of this disease are simply ridiculous.

Taking into consideration, then, the facts that a very large proportion of the herd (all we might most say) were affected with a disease communicable not only from animal to animal, but from animal to man; that in the future, death after death would occur yearly; that scarcely by any possibility could calves be raised from any of these cows that would reach maturity free from this pestilence; that animals purchased elsewhere and placed with this herd would (as past experience proves) soon become diseased; and that the barn itself is now infected, and must be left vacant for a considerable period; parts of it (floors, etc.) removed and burned, and a thorough and repeated disinfection be resorted to,—it becomes apparent to all, I think, that the only safe and proper course to pursue was the one advised, i. e.: the slaughter of the entire herd.

Some of the meat might have been used as food had it not been for the prejudice that was so generally felt against it. For some time it has been impossible to sell even the butter from these cows, and I was assured by every one likely to know, that under no circumstances could a pound of the meat be disposed of now, or even months later.

The swine on the farm that had been fed largely on the milk of these cows, were examined, and one pig nearly a year old was killed and carefully examined, but no traces of tuberculosis could be detected. The butcher who kills the pigs raised on the farm states that in some instances the liver has appeared diseased. In conclusion I can only recommend that when other animals are purchased that care be taken to buy from herds where this disease has never existed, and that each animal be examined at the time of purchase by your State Veterinarian. Very respectfully,

CH. B. MICHENER, V. S.,
Inspector Bureau of Animal Industry.

I fully concur with the above report.

Commissioner for Maine on Contagious Diseases of Animals.

Our Dover Letter.

[Regular Correspondence Whig & Courier.]

Rev. Mr. Morehouse of the Congregational church preached an interesting and instructive sermon before the graduating class of Foxcroft Academy, last Sunday, from John 6, 37.

In the evening the Y. M. C. A. of these towns held their first anniversary in this same church, at which a large audience was present. The exercises consisted of singing, remarks by members of the Association, clergymen and business men, and reports of the Secretary and Treasurer. The Secretary's report showed that a large amount of work had been done during the past year, and with good results. The Association have a fine hall, well furnished and containing a good organ and quite a large library. An effort is being made to raise a sufficient sum to employ a general secretary who shall devote his entire attention to work for the Association.

A boy named Ernest Pratt, about fourteen years old, who has lived with Mr. S. C. Towne, in Sebec, for several years, disappeared from his home, Sunday, and has not been heard from. Monday, some hundred men were searching for him but could find no trace of his whereabouts. Mr. Towne can give no reason for his leaving, and is greatly alarmed about him.

Mr. A. G. Blethen left Monday afternoon for Minneapolis, where he will reside in future. His family will remain here a few weeks, until he gets his house built, when they will join him. Mr. Blethen was one of our best citizens and leaves a large number of friends who sincerely regret that he thought best to make this change.

Our Pittsfield Letter.

[Regular Correspondence of Whig and Courier.]

There was an enthusiastic temperance meeting at the Universalist church last Sunday evening. Rev. U. H. Crawford, of the Methodist church, presided, and R. A. Conant led the singing. Stirring appeals for the cause were made by Rev. S. C. Whitcomb, Rev. W. H. Crawford, Robt. Dobson, H. A. Morrell, Mrs. J. S. Davis, R. A. Conant, J. C. Connor, and others.

Rev. A. L. Gerrish, of Providence, R. I., former y president of the Maine Central Institute, will deliver the anniversary sermon before the graduating class of that institution on June 6, 1886. In the evening of the same day he will deliver the annual address before the Y. P. C. Association.

Gen. Charles Hamlin, of Bangor, will deliver the address on Memorial Day before Stephen Davis Post, G. A. R.

There are several cases of diphtheria reported among children in this vicinity. It is to be hoped that it will not become prevalent.

The streets were sprinkled Tuesday for the first time this season.

Some of our older citizens are just beginning to take an interest in the matter of beautifying their homes by planting shade trees. A large number have been set in Pittsfield this spring. This is a matter that should have been attended to years ago, but "better late than never."

STATE NEWS.

Aroostook.

Work has been begun upon the trotting park in Houlton. Mr. A. T. Putnam, the proprietor, hopes to have the track completed by the 4th of July.

A young lady stopping in the family of Conductor Atridge, in Houlton, fell off the station platform Monday night, striking her head on the rail and cutting a gash about three inches long.

The Houlton Water Company will commence work on putting in service pipes on Monday of next week, May 10, running several crews of workmen. A large number of applications for service have already been filed with the Superintendent, and these will be laid in the order of application, as nearly as the proper progress of work will permit.

Cumberland.

Portland Commandery, Knights Templar, will make a pilgrimage to Bar Harbor and return, Thursday, June 24th, St. John's day.

The amount available for dredging Portland harbor is $7,500 instead of $15,000; and the contract has not been awarded, but is under consideration.

Mr. Palmer Woodward, of Brunswick, a young man who was seriously injured two years ago by falling over a sled in the night time left on the sidewalk in front of the Dennison box shop at Brunswick, has settled with that company without a lawsuit. It is understood that the amount paid Woodard was $1,500 and expenses.

The appropriation bill passed the Portland city government, Monday night. It amounts to $807,979.31, of which $720,000 is to be raised by taxation, being $16,000 more than last year. This larger expenditure is rendered necessary for a new school house, $7,000 is raised for the centennial celebration, July 4th. The Mayor was authorized to offer a reward of $1,000 for the detection of persons guilty of the crime of arson.

Kennebec.

Ex-Gov. Connor, Col. H. M. Sprague and Assistant Secretary of State, Chadbourne, take a fishing trip to Weld next week. The trout there are large and active, and a party who visited that section last season had rare sport.

A prominent lumberman states that from present indications, less logs will come down the Kennebec river this season than for many years past. A large portion of the drive is "hung up" in the streams on account of low water.

The Gardiner Bridge Company held a meeting, Monday, and elected the following directors for the ensuing year: S. J. Young, Brunswick; Westerl Lewis, B. A. Cox, L. W. Goodspeed, Gardiner; J. M. Carpenter Pittston. The company will probably appeal from the decision of the county commissioners in appraising the bridge.

BOUTELLE & BURR, PROPRIETORS.

C. A. BOUTELLE, EDITOR.

All business letters should be addressed to Boutelle & Burr, and communications intended for publication should be addressed: "Editor of Whig and Courier."

THURSDAY, MAY 6, 1886.

The New York Herald is alarmed at the President's attitude towards syndicates and corporations. And yet this is a Democratic Administration.

The Senate committee has reported favorably on the nomination of Mrs. Thompson for postmistress at Louisville. This will cause another howl from the Kentucky Bourbons.

The Tennessee Republicans have wisely decided not to go to the expense and trouble of holding two State Conventions this year, and to combine both in a two-days' assembly on June 15 and 16.

A Bangor man dropped dead while beating his wife.—Boston Traveller.

Will the Traveller kindly inform an interested public when this tragedy occurred? No one in Bangor has heard anything about it.

Democratic ex-Congressman Converse, of Ohio, concurs with the Republicans in the opinion that the cases of the four fraudulently chosen Senators from Hamilton County are not divisible and must be considered together.

The Commercial announces that Mr. Bass is not a candidate for a position on the Democratic National Committee. In view of the efforts he made to secure the position in 1884 this declaration looks very much like a case of sour grapes.

The Vicksburg Herald having informed Jefferson Davis that he is "not of the New South," it is warmly commended for its patriotic position. As the Herald is the same paper that defended the dastardly massacre that occurred in Mississippi not long since we fear that it is not entirely reconstructed.

When Mr. Blaine said that the Republicans were robbed of the trust of Government by Bourbon outrages in the South he was "waving the bloody shirt." But when Jeff. Davis talked rank treason the other day at Montgomery he was merely "wrapped in the mantle of regret." The Democrats and their allies have convenient eyes and can cross them at will.

It is now charged that the man selected by President Cleveland to succeed Mr. Douglass as Recorder of Deeds is an offensive partisan, having threatened the colored laborers in the Capital at Albany with discharge unless they voted the Democratic ticket. If this was not a reform Administration such an appointment would look very much like a political reward.

The announcement in the Boston Herald that the adoption of the Morrison bill would be of great benefit to the people of New England, and that a majority of the manufacturers favor it is only another indication of the desperation of the free trade advocates. Nothing could be further from the truth than the Herald's statement and the system of deliberate misrepresentation practiced by the free trade organs will only weaken an already hopeless cause.

The Fourth District Democratic Congressional Convention will be held in this city June third, the next day after the Democratic State Convention. The Commercial in announcing this fact says:

John F. Lynch, Esq., will probably be renominated by the Democrats of this District for Congress. If this course should happen to take it into their heads to vote for the best man Mr. Lynch would be elected by a thumping majority.

During the last campaign the Commercial and other Democratic papers gave Mr. Lynch a very thorough introduction to the people of this District and yet he was buried under nearly six thousand Republican majority.

Our despatches this morning give a sickening account of the terrible scenes enacted in Chicago and Bay View, Wisconsin, under the leadership of those human fiends known as Socialists. This shocking sacrifice of life is the direct result of the incendiary orators, who, masquerading as the champions of labor, play upon the passions of men until they are incited to deeds of violence that would be abhorrent to them in their cooler moments. Free speech is a glorious thing, but when such creatures as Most and Spies go about urging that murder is the only solution of the existing difficulties; that the free use of the dynamite bomb, the rifle and the bludgeon should take the place of arbitration, it is high time that the hand of the law was outstretched and agitators of that character placed where they can do no further mischief. These men are not the friends of honest labor, but the worst possible enemy. This dastardly and useless murder in the name of labor will work that cause almost irreparable injury. The laboring men themselves should be quick to realize this danger and unite with the officers of the law in putting an end to these mob tactics. Such deeds of violence as those at Chicago call for prompt and effective measures to prevent their repetition.

The Republican leaders are preparing for a vigorous Congressional campaign next fall. The chances for reversing the Democratic majority in the present House of Representatives are excellent, and if thorough organization and good management will avail the Republicans will control the Fiftieth Congress. The Republican Congressional Committee which was formed a few weeks ago, appointed a sub-committee composed of Senators Aldrich and Wilson and Representative Goff, Bingham and Cannon to prepare a plan of organization. This committee had agreed to recommend the election of Representative Goff as chairman. His acceptance was conditional upon the election of Hon. Edward McPherson, of Pennsylvania, as secretary. Mr. McPherson has filled the important position upon several occasions in the past, always performing his duties with entire satisfaction. He is familiar with the politics of every Congressional district in the country and has a technical knowledge of the subject that is invaluable. The full committee ratified the action of the sub-committee by electing Mr. Goff chairman and Mr. McPherson secretary. The following executive committee was elected: Senators Hawley, Sewell and Palmer; Representatives Burleigh, Bingham, Cannon, Thompson, of Ohio; Warren, of Missouri; Felton, McComas, O'Hara, Steele, Houck and Boutelle. Mr. McPherson said that it was the intention of the committee to open headquarters in Washington at once and to commence the work of a vigorous campaign.

Some of our northern doughface journals says the Lowell Courier, seem to take any criticism of Jeff Davis's treasonable drivel as itself rather disloyal. If this agent specimen of implacable hate were as lonesome in his views as some would have us believe, we might afford to laugh at the old rebel. But there are too many evidences of hearty encouragement among Southern people to allow us to consider Mr. Davis's tour as insignificant. It is his most treasonable expressions that receive the loudest applause, and leaders and makers of public opinion had him as a second Savior. D. is triumphant march, if it had occurred in the spring of 1884, would have given James G. Blaine a triumphal march to the White House, which no Burchard could have checked.

Home Rule.

GLADSTONE'S APPEAL.

Mr. Gladstone has issued a manifesto to his Midlothian constituents, in which he explains that his great age has prevented his taking part in the speeches of the Easter recess, and has obliged him to reserve his limited powers for the House of Commons, and for that reason he urges them instead of his voice:

He continues: "Never have I known an occasion when a parliamentary event so stirring throughout the world as the introduction of the Home Rule bill. From public meetings, from the highest authorities in the British colonies and in America, from capitals, such as Washington, Boston and Quebec, from remote districts, lying beyond the reach of ordinary political excitement, I have received conclusive assurances that kindred people regard with warm fraternal sympathy the attempt to set at once for all the troubled relations between England and Ireland, which, except only the one great failure of the political year, it is our race to confront and master with energy and to obtain in a reasonable degree the main ends of civilized life.

"You must not be disconcerted if in the upper ranks of society at home you hear a variety of discordant notes—discordant alike from our policy and from one another. You have before you, gentlemen, a task set determined in its purpose, and with an intelligible aim in its own. I see very little else in the political arena either determined or intelligible. I will now proceed to speak of the state of things within and without Parliament, and the nature and import of the next great step to be taken for the progress of my measure. I speak now of the Home Rule bill, and leave the Land Purchase bill to stand on the declaration already made, adding only an expression of regret to find that while the sands are running from the hour-glass the Irish landlords have given no indication of a desire to accept the proposal framed in a spirit of the utmost allowable regard for their apprehension and interest.

DIVISIONS AMONG THE LIBERALS.

"I do not underestimate the grave importance of differences of opinion among Liberals. Some are inclined to rule the whole question against us by authority. They say, 'Surely such a number of able, consistent, even extreme Liberals would not have receded except in obedience to the imperative dictates of truth and reason.' I will say nothing of the motives which determined us to confront the risk of such a parting. I earnestly recommend a recurrence to the lessons which history supplies. It is not the first time in the history of Liberalism that a section of the Liberals under chiefs of distinction and ability have dissented from the general view of the party to the delight and doubtless the advantage of the Tories. There was an illustrious secession previous to the war with Bonaparte. There was a similar secession when it was proposed to disestablish the Irish Church. But eventually in both cases it was proved that in principle the party was right and the secession was wrong. Comparing these with the present secession it was impossible not to be struck with a vital difference. In each previous secession the dissentients agreed upon an active, substantial policy. It is not so now. Some are in favor of unlimited coercion; others of moderated doses, while a few oppose coercion altogether. On the other side, some propose local government, some would give it to the counties, some to the provinces. Some, again, would give an administrative centre with legislative prerogatives, while some propose a legislative centre without power. Some, indeed, go beyond the proposition of the Government and actually recommend federation. Some after the proposal which they would recommend with every new speech.

VOICES OF THE OPPOSITION.

"It is admitted on all hands that social order is the first of all political aims. To secure this in Ireland the Liberals who are in secession offer a hundred conflicting remedies—or else no remedies at all. These remarks are as applicable to the Tories as they are to the Liberals. The opponents to the Government measure make a remarkable confession in their speeches. In each, whether suggestive or critical, they fail to express confidence in the permanent success of their opposition. To live from hand to mouth seems to be the height of their ambition, while they suspect what we all know, that the strife can only end in the concession of Home Rule.

"If this is so the real question is not the triumph of Irish autonomy, but the length and character of the struggle. Therefore, we want to shorten, they to lengthen the struggle. We say 'give free.' They by acts, if not by words, say, 'let us only give what we can no longer withhold.' We say, 'give now while the position of the Kingdom in the affairs of the world is free and strong.' They prefer to wait for a period of national difficulty that we may yield to the Irish demand in terror as we did in the year of 1778; as we did to the demands of the volunteers in 1782; as we did to Bonaparte in 1793, and as we did in the civil war in 1829. We say, 'act now, when moderation of thought and language rules in Irish councils;' while by the willing concurrence of all sides, every arrangement for the reservation of Imperial prerogatives can be made complete and absolute. They would postpone till an hour comes when the demands may be larger and the means of assistance less. We say, 'deal as with a master between brothers—a matter of justice and reason.'

SCOTCH AND WELSH HOME RULE.

"Now, however, a new terror is brought upon the stage—the terror of Home Rule for Scotland and Home Rule for Wales. This suggestion does not alarm me. Only give us a little time to look at this question in its order of merit. I am not sorry that Scotland and Wales have been named, because a serious naming of them serves to help our movement in behalf of Ireland. I can draw no vital distinction of right between the case of Ireland and the other cases, but there are many distinctions of circumstance. For many years I have hoped it might be found practicable to apply decentralizing processes, even perhaps to portions of different conditions, in each case which will naturally require differences of treatment will remain subject to the primary imperial obligations. I believe that the standard and measure of good government in Scotland and Wales will be eventually determined by public opinion in Scotland and Wales. On this I rely with as little as I can disparaging of the circumstances of the controversy with which we are threatened in the case of Ireland, whose woeful history for centuries emboldens some of us to treat her as if she had not a limited share in the great inheritance of human right—none at all in ordinary privilege or immunity.

THE ISSUE BEFORE THE COUNTRY.

"I have still to say a few words upon the issue which is named immediately before us at this moment. I know, gentlemen, from experience, when you have a great aim before how you are not apt to be drawn away by the artful raising of side issues. We have a great aim before us now. It is to restore your Parliament to efficacy by clearing and removing obstacles to its work; to treat the Irish question with a due regard to its specialties; to give heed to the voice of a people speaking in tones of moderation by the mouth of a vast majority of those whom we ourselves have made its constitutional representatives, and thus to strengthen and consolidate the Empire on a basis of mutual benefit and hearty loyalty. Such is the end.

"As for the means, we take the establishments at Dublin of a legislative body to make laws for Irish as contradistinguished from imperial affairs. It is with this that we are now busied and not with details and particulars. Their time will come. You remember how well the campaign against the franchise was managed by setting in the front of battle the pretended dangers of redistribution. But we are not now debating the amount of the Irish contributions to the Empire or the composition of the legislative body or the maintenance of a representative connection with Westminster. On these and many more questions we may and may not be at odds. But what we are debating is the larger question, which includes, I think, at once them all—the question whether you will or will not have regard to the prayer of Ireland for the management of affairs specifically and exclusively her own. This and no other is the matter which the House of Commons has to decide. If it speaks with a clear and intelligible voice on this matter I feel the strongest assurance that the others, difficult as some of them are, will nevertheless with the aid of full discussion and a wise conciliatory spirit, be found capable of a rational and tolerable settlement. It is little that I can do in this most grave matter. It is no more than to devote with cheerfulness to the cause the small available residue of active life.

"And now let me, in these closing words, extend my view beyond my own honored constituency and in one sentence say to you, my countrymen of Scotland and England, I can do much with you essentially and not with any person, or class, or section among you. It rests with you to deliver the great aye or no; on your choice between which depend all the best hopes of the land and much that touches in its honor and high interest Great Britain and the mighty empire of our Queen."

DEEDS OF BLOOD.

Tuesday Night's Wicked Work in Chicago.

Dealing Death With Dynamite Bombs.

Brave Work of the Policemen.

Socialist Leaders Arrested and Held for Murder.

A Mob of Socialists in Wisconsin Shot Down by the Militia.

The Mob Dispersed.

A Fuller Report of Tuesday Night's Work.

CHICAGO, May 5. The Anarchists of Chicago inaugurated in earnest last night the reign of lawlessness which they have threatened and endeavored to incite for years. They threw a bomb into the midst of a line of 200 police officers and it exploded with fearful effect, mowing men down like cattle. Almost before the missile of death had exploded the Anarchists directed a murderous fire from revolvers upon the police as if their action was prearranged, and as the latter were hemmed in on every side the effect of the fire upon the ranks of the officers was fearful.

When the police had recovered from the first shock of the attack they gallantly charged upon their would-be murderers, shooting at every step and mowing them down, as their fellow officers had been by the bomb. The Anarchists fled in dismay before the charge, but everywhere they turned a withering fire from the revolvers of the policemen, who followed them, thinned their ranks. The cowardly assassins finding that their attack did not completely annihilate the officers and that a force large enough to cope with them was at hand, fled in all directions, seeking the darkness of alleys and side streets to escape the revengeful fire of the police.

How the Anarchists Brought on the Riot.

The collision between the police and the Anarchists was brought about by the leaders of the latter, August Spies, Sam Fielder and A. R. Parsons, endeavoring to incite the mass meeting to riot. From the Socialists' headquarters there was issued late in the afternoon the following circular, which was distributed throughout the laboring quarters of the city by thousands:

Attention workingmen!
Great mass meeting to-night at 7:30 at the Haymarket, Randolph street, between Desplaines and Halsted. Good speakers will be present to denounce the latest act of the police, the shooting of our fellow workmen yesterday afternoon.
(Signed) THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

Socialist Spies' Incendiary Talk.

At eight o'clock a large crowd had collected on Desplaines street just north of Randolph in a dimly lighted spot near which were many wagons and trucks. August Spies was the first speaker. After a long rambling talk on the labor problem he asked, "what means this display of Gatling guns, cannon, bayonets, patrol wagons and clubs? What means the calling out of the First Regiment? Is it as an entertainment for you, gentlemen? The demands of McCormick's men were reasonable and yet McCormick denies that he is responsible for the blood shed yesterday.

I say he lies. He is responsible for the death of our brothers. There are 25,000 of 30,000 families in Chicago suffering starvation to-day because the husband and fathers are not men enough to stand up for their rights."

Loud cheers followed this speech and cries of "the lake" and "the rope" were heard from hoarse throats.

A. R. Parsons was the next speaker. He went into labor statistics largely and defined the difference between trade unionists and Socialists.

A Socialistic Englishman.

Sam Fielder, a Socialistic Englishman, was the next and last speaker. He harangued the mob in a loud blatant way and asked what was the crowd before him. He said: "We who come here to address you are Socialists, rebels to law. Legislation will never help you, never. Martin Foran went to Congress in the interest of labor and he tells you that no legislation can be had for the workingman. Can't we find some? When the rich man understands that it is not healthy to live among a lot of discontented workingmen we shall be able to get legislation and not before."

The Casualties in Tuesday Night's Riot.

CHICAGO, May 5. The list of casualties as far as can be learned foot up as follows: One Socialist dead, two officers dead, four other officers who may not survive and 30 more police who have wounds, many of almost serious character. In addition to this probably 50 people, nearly all members of the Socialist crowd, were shot or otherwise injured. The computation of a detailed list is made almost impossible the confusion and excitement is so great.

A great number of the injured were quickly taken to the different hospitals and to private houses so that it may be days before the full extent of the horror can be brought to light.

Murdered While on His Beat.

It was reported at the 12th street station early this morning that the body of a police officer was found on the corner of West Lake street and Elizabeth after midnight with nine bullet wounds in the corpse. The distance from the scene of the carnage on West Randolph street led to the theory given that he had been shot down while on his beat. This morning there were at the county hospital 27 wounded officers and three citizens. In probing the wounds physicians found large pieces of zinc. One small thin piece of zinc made a hole in a man's leg as large as a grape shot.

The Cause of the Outbreak.

The occurrences of Monday and last night are ascribed in the public mind to the teachings and recent utterances principally of the three Socialists, August Spies, A. R. Parsons and Samuel Fielding. They have been pointed out by nearly every paper in the city during the past four days and the tragic culmination at Desplaines street has only appeared to emphasize these warnings. Their arrest has been repeatedly demanded. When the firing began last night Parsons was the only man who was seen to be recognized.

He was in a liquor store at the corner of Desplaines and Lake streets, the Socialists' headquarters, within 150 feet of the point where the bomb was thrown. The firing at the police came from the same quarter and it is surmised that the criminals obtained their guns and made the Socialist hall their headquarters, from whence they proceeded to make their assault. They were concealed behind boxes and barrels on the sidewalk, leveling their guns and firing during the confusion which followed the explosion of the bomb.

Arrest of the Conspirators.

Parsons, one of the speakers, was seen in the place accompanied by his negro wife for only a moment and he then disappeared with the other Anarchists. The police searched for the three men all night but did not succeed in finding them until after 8 this morning, all three being found in a close room in the office of the Arbeiter Zeitung. They were in consultation when the officers came upon them. They exhibited alarm but made no resistance. They were taken quickly to the Central Police Station one block away and up to 9 o'clock the public had not been made aware of their arrest.

They are kept closely guarded and no one is permitted to see them. It is not known what, if any, charge has been made against them and what is the exact policy of the city authorities. They have in evidence against Spies his guarded but inflammatory utterances in his newspaper in which he has within the past few days urged dynamite warfare against the police and all the regularly constituted authorities. His direct connection and that of his companions in the events of the past two days appears very clear.

Collecting Evidence.

The police are rapidly collecting evidence against the chief conspirators, the Anarchists. They searched office this morning and found absolute proof. The inflammatory circulars mentioned in these despatches and headed, "Revenge, workingmen! To arms" and another headed, "Attention, workingmen," were found with the forms in type.

The Anarchist Parsons

has not been captured as at first reported. He is still in hiding. Schwab was mistaken for him when the first arrests were made. Inspector Bonfield raided Zeff's hall, corner of Lake and Desplaine streets this morning. Here were found a lot of books expounding Socialistic doctrines.

Aid to the Wounded Officers.

Nearly $10,000 has been subscribed on change for the families of the wounded and dead officers.

There is no truth in the rumor of the killing of police officers this morning on the tracks of the Fort Wayne road. Shortly after noon the police made another raid on the office of the Arbeiter Zeitung. They arrested a man in the office who, upon being searched produced a large revolver. He was placed under arrest. In the office was and a number of red flags and banners. A mob of 6,000 to 8,000 persons reassembled near the corner of 18th street and Center avenue at noon and raided Rosenfeld's drug store, carrying off everything in the store. They then raided a liquor store in the vicinity, carrying away some liquor. The police returned to the scene and succeeded in dispersing the mob. It has finally been decided by the Mayor to issue a proclamation. It will call on all persons to keep off the streets after dark and warns them not to gather in crowds on the streets or in vacant lots.

Fire Arms Seized.

The police raided the establishment kept by C. H. Bissell, at 100 South Clark street, this afternoon, carrying away ninety guns and revolvers. It was declared that Bissel had been supplying the Socialists with guns.

The Socialist Sheet Suspended.

Mayor Harrison, with several detectives, visited the Arbeiter Zeitung office to-day and held a consultation with Oscar Neebe, who said he did not belong to the office but was employed to get out the paper. The Mayor told him the paper would not be issued until inspected by Mr. Land, whom he would send for that purpose. Neebe promised that nothing of an inflammatory nature should appear in the paper. Before the paper was issued, however, a raid was was made on the printing office and twenty-five printers were arrested. On the door leading to the office of the Arbeiter Zeitung the following notice in German is pasted: "The Arbeiter Zeitung will not be published for the next few days. Advertisements, etc., can be left in the saloon in the basement."

The City Remains Quiet.

2.30 P. M.—The city remains quiet up to this hour. The railway companies have sustained no molestation of any kind and with the exception of the Lake Shore are taking about all the freight offered. The Northwestern Road has arranged to resume operations to-morrow with a full force of men. Forty-five wounded officers and men are at the County Hospital. Officer Diegan is the only one dead among the injured officers. The announcement of the death of Officers Barrett and Hanson was wrongly reported.

At two o'clock Officer Barrett was reported dying and there appears to be of officers John Miller, Jacob Hansen, Nelson Hanson and Thomas Redden. The remaining twenty-four officers in the county hospital wards all have a show for recovery, but some are extremely low. Two rioters, Emil Lutz and John Esplaur, are in a very critical condition and it is expected that they will die. The names of the following persons at the hospital suffering from wounds did not appear in the earlier accounts: Strikers John Frazer and Frank Rush; Officers William Burns, James Brady and Nels Hansen.

Vandalism of the Mob

The crowd that wrecked the drug store was composed of men, women and children. They acted like insane people, the male portion yelling, the females screaming and the boys whistling in and in to the place. In less time than it takes to tell it the store was completely gutted. The rioters drank up all the liquors. The next point of attack was Weiskopf's saloon. Is is under the hall where the Anarchists have been holding their meetings. Barrels of liquor were rolled out, the heads broken out and

The Rioters Revelled in the Liquor

Bottles of whiskey, wine and beer were consumed and then the work of demolishing the fixtures was proceeded with. Not a table or chair was left unbroken, the ice chest and counter being split up into kindling wood. Lieutenant Shepard with a large force of men, were quickly summoned and the mob ran like frightened curs before them, skulking away into alley ways. After driving them from the streets the police retired, leaving a guard to preserve order.

Coroner's Inquest—Held for Murder.

The inquest over the remains of police officer Diegan who was murdered by the Anarchist last night was concluded at 8.40 this evening. Chris. Spies and Michael Schwab, two of the prisoners, made statements in their own behalf which damaged rather than helped them. Schwab admitted that he did not believe in a personal God. Schwab was asked a great many questions. He grew pale and excited and the perspiration stood on his forehead. Fielding made a statement that was unimportant.

The jury were out half an hour before agreeing on a verdict. They recommended that all the prisoners be held for murder. The prisoners were held without bail. The jury also recommended that Parsons be apprehended.

It has been learned that a brother of August Spies was wounded last night and will probably die. Mrs. A. P. Parsons, wife of the fugitive Anarchist, was arrested this afternoon and was locked up at Central station.

An Ill-Advised Action.

One of the evening papers published the following:

"Headquarters of 49, Vigilance Committee, May 5th:
Meet sharp at 1.40. (Signed) A. R. 76—5th st.—
Business of great importance. Spies, Parsons and Schwab and others of their kind beware. Rope does its work well. The massacre of our brave policemen must be avenged.
By order of the Executive Committee. (Signed.) X. X."

Proclamation by the Mayor.

The Mayor to-day after consulting his department officers and citizens, published a proclamation forbidding the gathering of people in crowds, in processions in the streets and in public places as being dangerous to public peace.

A Mob Fired Upon by the Military.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., May 5—9 A. M. Reports from Bay View says that the military fired on the mob this morning. Two of the rioters are known to have been killed. The mob is marching towards the Allis' works, which started under military protection this morning. The Light Horse Squadron are on the way to Allis' works. A large gathering of Socialists is reported at the Milwaukee Garden. The police are on their way to the spot. Serious trouble is feared.

Later Report of the Affair.

The latest reports from Bay View show a much more serious condition of affairs than at first reported. A crowd of rioters commenced to form at 8.30 and moved towards the mills. Six militia companies were marched out of the grounds and stacked arms in front of the works and as the crowd approached, paying no attention to orders to halt, the dread word of "fire" was given and a volley of bullets was poured into the crowd. The rioters made a hasty retreat when it was learned that five lives had been sacrificed and several persons wounded. One of the killed was a school boy who had his school books under his arm when he fell.

Large Assemblage of Socialists.

While the trouble was going on at Bay View a large crowd of Socialists and strikers assembled at the Milwaukee Garden on the west side and were preparing to carry out a programme of riot and destruction. A platoon of sixty policemen and three infantry companies were despatched there and closed the premises. The mob then assembled and proceeded to Best's brewery and word is just received at military headquarters that a disturbance took place there in which it became necessary to resort to firing and that two persons were killed. The city is in a state of excitement equalled at no time since the recent trouble commenced.

Report Denied.

Noon—The report that two men were killed at Best's brewery is found to be untrue. Several shots were fired but no person was killed.

The List of Killed and Wounded

at Bay View is as follows: Three killed and six wounded, several dangerously. The firing of the militia and the fatal consequences resulted in dispersing the mob in great part. The rioters, or those of Polish nationality at least, returned to the city south side and proceeded to sack the residence of Captain Borchardt of the Kosciusko Guard. His residence is a complete wreck. The infuriated Polanders then assembled near the Polish church and it is rumored that they decided to arm themselves and make a raid on the militia at Bay View Mills this afternoon.

The Situation in Boston.

BOSTON, May 5. Several more carpenters' firms have agreed to the demands of their striking workmen and 450 printers have returned to work, fifty-three firms having signed the agreement. Four more boss plumbers have made concessions. This makes nine firms which employ seventy men who have resumed work. The master builders and carpenters of the Mechanics' Exchange have made no concessions and all the men are still out. Those carpentering firms mentioned above are small concerns outside of the Master Builders' Association.

Report of Concessions to Shorter Days.

NEW YORK, May 5. The pattern makers report to-day that with the exception of one foundry nearly all the employers had conceded the demand of workers for shorter hours and that the success of the strike was assured. The furnishers reported to-day that their trouble was nearly at an end many of the largest employers conceding eight hours. Carriage makers and furriers report a like progress.

An Attack from a Mob Promptly Met by the Military—Several Rioters Killed and Wounded.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., May 5. The residents of the southern section of the city who were bestirred at an early hour this morning noticed the movement of a great number of Poles who had participated in yesterday's riots at Bay View, singly and in pairs, making their way towards a large Polish church in that section of the city. By 6 A. M. 400 men were assembled, each bearing huge clubs, iron bars or some other implement of warfare. The men were formed in line and at the order "forward, march" proceeded in the direction of Bay View, raising the cry as they went "Kill the militia!" and "burn the mills."

Being apprised of the mob coming Major Traemer ordered the four companies under his command from inside the rolling mills enclosure where they had been in camp during the night and stationed them in the best position to check the attacking mob. As the latter approached they were ordered to stop. No heed was given so Major Traemer repeated the order and gave all fair warning that to advance meant death. Again the crowd, which now numbered 1,500, ignored the caution and pushed toward the bridge. The Major had orders to keep any crowd from approaching the mills and to fire on them as a last resort if orders could not be otherwise enforced.

Accordingly when no attention had been given to the second warning he gave the order to fire. As near as could be learned the companies emptied their guns with a steady aim at the throng. Seeing several of the number fall wounded or dead, the mob threw themselves flat on the ground and sought the shelter of the railroad embankment. There was every evidence on the surrounding objects to show that the militia had fired low and with intent to kill, as one of them expressed it. The first volley having such salutary effect the militia again stacked their arms and portions of the routed men returned from the scene of the tragedy.

A squad of police also put in their appearance and began to assist the wounded. Several of the latter were taken to neighboring saloons and dosed with whiskey, after which they were conveyed to their homes. Two leaders of the Socialists have been arrested, which will undoubtedly have a tendency to lessen the enthusiasm of that class and do much towards stopping further rioting.

FORTY-NINTH CONGRESS.—1st Session.

Senate.

WASHINGTON, May 5. After the transaction of considerable minor business the Inter-State commerce bill was laid before the Senate. The pending amendment was that of Mr. Camden being the absolute long and short haul clause applied to each railroad separately.

Mr. Spooner opposed the amendment, but favored the general principles of the bill.

After some debate a vote was taken on Mr. Camden's amendment and it was agreed to, yeas 20, nays 24. The technical form of the amendment thus agreed to strikes out from the long and short haul clause of the committee's bill the words "from the same original point of departure."

At 4.30 P. M., on motion of Mr. Cameron the Senate went into executive session. At 5.10 the doors were reopened and the Senate adjourned.

House.

In the House this morning Mr. Dockery, of Missouri, from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, reported the bill to extend the free delivery service; House calendar.

Mr. Frederick, from Iowa, from the Committee on the Alcoholic Liquor Traffic, reported adversely the Senate bill providing for a committee on the subject of the liquor traffic; Committee of the Whole.

The day being set aside for the consideration of business reported from the Committee on Military affairs, the first bill called up and which was considered in Committee of the Whole was one for the relief of certain officers of the volunteer army.

Mr. Hewitt opposed the bill, saying it was time to call a halt on these lavish appropriations of money. Instead of throwing the contents of the treasury into the street something should be done to relieve the people from onerous and unjust taxation. The Democrats of this House Mr. Hewitt said, have a majority. There is a bill pending which will reduce taxes about $25,000,000. I know that efforts have been made to prevent the consideration and passage of that bill, and I will go in sackcloth and ashes if necessary in order to make atonement for the failure of this House and my party and Administration to fulfil the pledges they made to the people when they asked for their votes and received a verdict which placed them in power. We shall be traitors to every obligation which we assumed, to every duty which we are sent here to fulfil unless we awake to the sentiment of the people on this great question, and instead of imposing taxes and making new appropriations, reduce taxes and lighten the burdens on the energies of the people.

On motion of Mr. Holman, of Indiana, an amendment was adopted extending the provisions of the act to the widows of such re-enlisted volunteer soldiers as may be deceased.

Mr. Boutelle, of Maine, offered an amendment extending the provisions of the bill to enlisted men in the navy and marine corps.

At first many of the Democrats refrained from voting and left the committee without a quorum, but after a roll call a quorum appeared and the amendment was adopted, 127 to 27.

Pending further action the committee rose and at 5 o'clock the House took a recess until 7.30, the evening session to be for the consideration of business reported from the Military Committee.

The members of the Bangor Band are as yet undecided whether or not to maintain that organization during the coming summer. They have almost decided not to do so. Their outlay during the past few years for expenses has been about as much as their income and they do not care to occupy their time with practicing and playing for nothing, they say. There is a prospect that efforts will be made to secure an appropriation from the City Government for the band.

Much talk was made on the streets yesterday regarding the order of the Bradstreet Brothers causing six millions of feet of their logs to be left at Second Roach Pond to summer and winter on account of the labor troubles. For this purpose a novel way has been devised. Yesterday afternoon at the regular meeting ten squash seeds were given to each member of the band. These are to be planted. Next fall the squashes are to be brought in, and prizes distributed. A dollar is offered for the largest squash; a dollar for the smallest; a dollar for the largest number; and a dollar for the heaviest lot raised from ten seeds. Then the squashes will be sold at auction and the proceeds devoted to the object of the band. The children advise their grown up friends not to plant squashes this summer, but to secure their supply of the band next fall. This is the squash proposition.

D., pastor of the Pine street Methodist church, Portland, and a very warm personal friend of Mr. Ladd's. Miss Osgood is one of the most highly esteemed young ladies of our city and has been very prominent as a vocalist. A RUNAWAY BOY

Causes Much Trouble in Sebec and Elsewhere—Thought to be in This City—His Description.

Last Sunday morning Ernest Pratt, a bright fifteen years old boy, who has been living with his uncle, Sanford Towne, at Sebec, for the past two years, took a small axe and started off into the woods after spruce gum, as he said. He did not return at noon and the family was greatly worried. At two o'clock several men started to search for him and continued throughout the afternoon, but with no success. The next day it was noised about that he had been lost in the woods and twenty-eight men hunted for him all day. They found a frock that he wore only a short distance from the house, but supposed that he was warm and threw it off.

The finding of his axe standing against a fence led some of the searchers to believe that spruce gum was not the object of his expedition after all. Tuesday morning Rufus F. Towne, one of the boy's relatives, took a team and started down the line of the railroad towards this city in the hope of finding some trace of the young fellow. When he reached Orneville he found parties who had seen a boy answering to his description walking down the track Sunday afternoon. At LaGrange also parties described the same boy and said that they had seen him early Sunday night and had questioned him in regard to his destination, but he refused to tell. Mr. Towne concluded that the young fellow was heading towards Bangor and kept on to this city.

Yesterday afternoon he found some section men at the Basin Mills who had seen the boy about three o'clock Monday afternoon passing that place. He had told them that he was going to Bangor and ship on board some vessel. Mr. Towne immediately came to this city and notified the police, but up to a late hour last evening the runaway was undiscovered. Pratt is rather small of his age with dark hair and a very freckled face. He had on a light gray coat, rather small, brown overalls, a dark slouch hat, and boots. He wore a drab woolen shirt trimmed with red. His parents reside in Lowell, Mass., and he has been in a reform school in that State. During the past two years, however, he has resided with Mr. Towne and been very steady. His father arrived from Lowell yesterday to assist in the search for him. Mr. Towne is stopping at the Windsor Hotel and to-day will hunt all over the city for young Pratt. It is not thought that he has shipped yet. He is not known to have any money but may have obtained some from an unknown source for this trip.

Successfully Opened Yesterday.

The opening of a dry goods establishment in this city with an entirely new stock is a very rare occurrence, but yesterday morning Mr. E. H. Hall opened the doors of his fine store at 23 Main street, and displayed one of the most attractive lines of dry and fancy goods ever shown in Bangor. The store itself has been entirely repaired since the fire there some weeks ago. Paint, etc., applied throughout the whole interior has caused it to assume a very fresh and bright appearance. The electric light has been put in adding much to the effect of the evening display. A new cashier's desk occupies a prominent position about midway of the store while the latest improved cash system has been introduced and works perfectly.

Mr. Hall has been too long a merchant on Main street and is too well and favorably known to need any introduction to the public. He has, however, in his new store made slight changes from the old which deserve mention. In purchasing the present stock Mr. Hall devoted much attention to fancy goods and trimmings and shows an elegant assortment. His lace department is very complete and an elegant line of kid gloves is sure to attract the notice of customers. Very handsome beaded laces and dress-fronts and passamenteries occupy a prominent position as do also the beautiful fans and parasols, goods which cannot be excelled east of Boston. Passing down the store one notices a full line of ladies' and gentlemen's furnishing goods, table linen, toilet goods, and summer fabrics and white goods of every description. It is needless to attempt to enumerate any part of the goods, but the person wishing to purchase anything in the dry and fancy goods line can hardly leave this store without having their wants supplied in a most satisfactory manner. Mr. Hall has plenty of polite and experienced clerks and with all his other facilities will no doubt command his full share of the trade.

AMUSEMENTS.

The Bangor "Mikado."

The Bangor Opera Company closed its very successful season at the Opera House last evening. Although the Mikado has been seen here many times a large and brilliant audience assembled to witness the presentation and grew quite enthusiastic over the singing and acting. The company during its tour has become perfectly at home upon the stage and all of its members act like old professionals. That so fine an amateur company could be gotten up here has been a matter of surprise and gratification to all of our citizens and more and more praise has been given it at every performance. The chorus last night was nearly the same as when the opera was first given here by the company and the magnificent singing was listened to with the utmost pleasure.

Miss Etta May Hunt as "Yum Yum" was warmly received and fully sustained her high reputation here. Her voice is strong, well cultivated and used with remarkably fine effect. Her acting was also praised and she was the recipient of an elegant basket of flowers. The other parts were all impersonated in the same splendid manner as in the first performances. Messrs. Owen, Mooty, Lincoln, Brett and Dinsmore, Mrs. Chase and Misses Lobdell and Tozier shared equally the honors of the evening all being heartily applauded at many portions of the entertainment. Mrs. Chase, after the "Tit Willow" song was presented with a beautiful basket of flowers.

Nearly every one of the leading songs of the opera were encored and had to be repeated. One of the leading features introduced was a full orchestra. They played the overture splendidly, but had not received sufficient practice to accompany the soloists in a perfect manner. The stage settings were simply magnificent and far ahead of anything of the kind ever attempted here. Electric lights in globes of different colors among Japanese fans, lanterns, and screens, gave a most brilliant effect. Noticeable in the general decorations were a fountain and two handsomely mounted peacocks. In the whole work Mr. G. Will Pickering fully displayed his taste and skill and the thanks of the whole audience are due to him for the pleasure afforded them.

We extend our congratulations to Manager Owen, Director Davenport and the entire company upon the success which they have achieved. In their visits to the different towns and cities they have reflected the highest credit upon Bangor's musical and dramatic talent and it is hoped that at no distant day the company may again appear on the stage.

The Dalys in "Vacation."

Those who love fun are sure to see the Dalys at the Opera House this evening when they appear in their very laughable athletic comedy. The party will arrive this noon on the train from Belfast. The Dalys have too good a reputation here to need any praise. The sale of seats for their performance has been large and crowded houses to-night and to-morrow night are expected.

Alvin Joslin.

The Wilmington, Del., Chronicle has the following to say about Mr. Charles L. Davis as Alvin Joslin, who will appear here next Monday evening:

Mr. Davis has a fine band with him this year, which entertained our citizens with some of the best music ever heard from a band in Delaware, and the evening's enjoyment was made more pleasant than usual by a first-class orchestra formed from the band. Taken all in all, Mr. Davis well deserves the success he is meeting with everywhere, as he does not for lack of money stint his patrons in having the best that can be had. He has made himself a good reputation here, and as a consequence his yearly visits here are greeted with the largest houses of the season.

Notes.

In the New York Clipper this week is a notice of the presentation of the Mikado at the Metropolitan Opera House. Particular mention is made of a magnificent orchestra of forty-two pieces under the leadership of Mr. John C. Mullaly, who is paid a very high compliment in the notice. Mr. Mullaly is well known here being a son of Mr. J. M. Mullaly.

The Signalman's Story

A song which was very popular when I was a boy says, "Most folks fall in love, no doubt, some time or other." It might with equal truth have said that most folks fall in love two or three times over. I am sure it was the case with me. It was also my fate to do what, I am told, is one of the commonest things in the world—that is, to fall violently in love with a person entirely out of my own circle; not below it, like the king and the beggar maid, but a great deal above me; with a girl, too, who was as proud and haughty and stony as Juno or a sphinx.

In the time to which I refer, near y fifty years ago now—I am seventy-one next birthday—the railway system was in its infancy, but yet was spreading fast and I was one of the earliest servants. It was in no exalted position that I served. My father was dead; my mother rented a small cottage on the land of the nobleman in whose service her husband had lived and died; and this nobleman recommended me to a railway company which had just constructed a branch through his estates. I was at first a porter, but afterward a signalman, and as a great favor, I was assigned a post on the branch just mentioned, close to my own house. The signal was not far from the junction of the branch with the main line; a very lonely spot for a long way in either direction, although there was a thriving town, some five miles down the branch; and there was a siding close by where the trucks used in the scanty local traffic were collected.

There were some cottages near my crossing—I ought to have said that there was a level crossing not far from my box; in one of these I lived; a sprinkling of farm-houses and several very good houses of a higher class were within sight. In one of these latter, not by any means the grandest, but handsome enough for all that, lived Squire Cleabyrn; and it was with his only daughter, Miss Beatrice, that I chose to fall in love. For that matter, I dare say a score of other young fellows as poor as myself were as earnestly in love with her as I was, but they probably had sufficient sense not to show their folly. I did show mine. I could not help it; and when I recall all I felt and suffered at the time I feel I must retract my admission that others were as much in love with her as myself, but had the sense to conceal it; such a thing would have been impossible. They could not have concealed it; they might have refrained from talking about it. I did not talk; but had they seen the girl as often as I did, and looked into her face as closely as I did, they could not have hidden their infatuation from her. In return, she would have looked at them with the same haughty indifference—which yet had a something of contemptuous wonder in it—as I was treated with.

Not that my story has anything of the "Lady of Lyons" flavor about it; I was no Claude to an English Pauline; but this girl, this Miss Beatrice, was so amazingly beautiful that she was famed for full twenty miles around. In addition she was one of the best horsewomen in the county, and this enabled me to see more of her than I should otherwise have done. She used to ride out, sometimes with a servant only, sometimes with a party, nearly every day; and nearly every day she came through the gates at my crossing. I tried not to look at her, feeling and knowing that there sparkled from my eager eyes more feeling than I should have allowed to escape me—but in vain. I could not withhold my gaze from that cold, dark face—she was not a blonde beauty; golden hair was not the rage in those days—or from her large, deep, unfathomable eyes, that looked through me and past me as though I had not been there, or was at best no more than a part of the barrier I swung open for her passage. Yet these eyes, as I even then knew but too well, read me to the core, while they seemed to ignore me.

I am almost ashamed to own it now, and even at this distance of time it makes my cheeks tingle to recall it, but I have wasted a whole afternoon, when I had a "turn off," in hope of seeing Miss Cleabyrn.

Her father's house stood on a knoll, with smooth open lawns sloping down from it on all sides, so that from my signal-box I could see when any one was walking in the front of the mansion, and when a party assembled to ride out. Well, I have actually lingered, on some feeble pretence, for four or five hours about the signal-box, in hope that she might walk on the lawn, or that she might mount and ride through our gates.

I well remember that it was on one of these afternoons that Miss Beatrice rode through with a small party. Ah! I recall them easily enough. There was one other lady and three gentlemen. To open the gate for them, for her, was the opportunity I had been longing, waiting for; so I offered to do this to assist my mate, who had relieved me, and who was glad enough to be spared the labor; and I caught a full glance from the eyes of Miss Beatrice. The look was one in which she seemed to exchange glances with me. I knew it meant nothing, that it was all a delusion, and yet it would be enough to haunt me for days. I knew that also. I had never seen her look so beautiful before, and I felt my cheeks and brow turn burning hot in the instant I met this glance.

They passed. I watched them to the last—I always did—and I saw her turn her head toward the gentleman who rode by her side. The movement brought her profile so plainly in view that I could see she was smiling. As I watched her, the gentleman turned around and looked in my direction. He was smiling also; it was something beyond a smile with him, and I then reddened more with shame than I had before done with excitement, for I knew he was laughing at me. So Miss Cleabyrn must have been laughing also; and at what? I was the subject of their ridicule; and it served me right. Yes; I knew that at the moment, but to know it did not make the bitter pang less painful.

I went back to my comrade at the signal-box. He, too, had noticed the group, and said as I entered the hut: "That was the party from Elm Knoll, wasn't it? Ah! I thought so; and of course that was the celebrated Miss Cleabyrn. You know who that was riding by her side, I suppose?"

"No," I said, answering as calmly as I could; I was almost afraid to trust my voice.

"That's a young fellow, a captain from somewhere," continued my mate, "who is going to marry Miss Cleabyrn. He has got a lot of money. So has she. Sam Powell, who drives the night-mail, knows him, and told me all about it."

As the speaker had no idea of the absurd state I was in, he took no particular notice of me, but changed the subject and went on with some indifferent topic.

I was glad he did so, for although I had an utter contempt for myself and for my folly in allowing the conduct of the future of Miss Cleabyrn to excite me, yet I could not have conversed on such a theme as her marriage; while the knowledge that the person to whom I had been ridiculed—I felt sure of that—was her avowed lover, seemed to increase the bitterness of the sting tenfold.

I had ample opportunity of seeing that the report which I had heard was likely, at any rate, to be founded in fact, as the stranger, the "captain from somewhere," remained a guest at Elm Knoll for fully a fortnight, during which time not a day passed without my seeing both him and Miss Cleabyrn, and sometimes more than once each day. So I came to know him by sight as well as I did her. He was a frank, handsome young fellow; that I could see, and was obliged to own; and in his speech he was pleasant. This was shown by his stopping on two or three occasions, when riding alone, to ask me some questions as I opened the gate for him.

I was sure he made these occasions, and at first disliked him for it; but I could not continue to bear ill will against a man of such kindly open manners, so I relented, and ere he left the neighborhood used to look forward with pleasure to seeing him. This was a sad falling off from my previous lofty moods, and so was my accepting a cigar from him as he rode through. In fact, although I have no doubt "written myself an ass," as our old friend Dogberry would have said, yet at the worst I was not without some glimmering of sense, which saved me from making an absolute example of myself.

Even during the short time in which the Captain—I did not know his name—was visiting at Elm Knoll, the heat and surge of my absurd passion had perceptibly moderated, and just then several circumstances combined to restore me to a right frame of mind.

After the Captain's departure Miss Beatrice left home on a prolonged visit, so that I did not see her; and at the same time I met Patty Carr, who was, in her way, quite as pretty as Beatrice Cleabyrn, although not nearly so haughty; and my heart being specially tender and open to impression just then, I suppose, I speedily thought more of her than of the young lady at Elm Knoll. Indeed, we were married the next year.

At the time I speak of, a good many things were in vogue, or at least had not died out, which have quite vanished now, and amongst these was dueling. Every now and then a duel was fought, but the ridicule which attended bloodless meetings, and the greater activity of the police in cases where harm was done, were diminishing them greatly, yet still they did occasionally happen. A great stir was made by a violent quarrel among some officers of a regiment quartered in Lancashire, in which a challenge to fight a duel had been given and refused. It was called in the papers of the day, "The Great Military Scandal," and arose in the following manner. A certain Major Starley had offered a gross insult to a young lady, on whom, it appeared, he had been forcing his attentions for some time, and her only relative, a half-brother, was in the same regiment with the Major. The details were not pleasant, and it was no wonder that Captain Laurens on challenged the Major; but the latter declined the challenge on some professional grounds; and when the parties met, high words passed. These commenced, it appeared, with the Captain; but each became violent in the dispute, until at last the Captain thrashed his antagonist in the presence of several officers. This was not a make-believe beating; a "consider-yourself-horsewhipped" affair, but a right-down "welting," the Major being badly cut and bruised. This was serious enough, anyhow; but what made it worse was that the officers were on duty at the time, and by the strict letter of military law, the Captain would certainly be punished with death.

He had expected, it seems, that after so public and such a painful humiliation, he would infallibly receive a challenge from the injured officer; but it was not so. He was placed in arrest in the barracks, and expected to be brought to a court-martial. He heard, however, from some friendly source that it was intended to hand him over to the civil power, when he would be charged with an assault with intent to kill.

In those days almost anything was transportable, and as Major Starley belonged to one of the most influential families in the kingdom, there was no doubt that the Captain would be sent to a convict settlement; there was also no doubt that the prosecution would be conducted in the most vindictive spirit and pushed to the bitterest end.

Terrified at such a prospect, the young officer escaped from the barracks, by connivance of the guard, there was reason to suppose, although this was never completely proved; at any rate he got clear away and disappeared. Immediate advantage was taken of this fatal although very natural step, and a reward was at once offered for his apprehension. If he could get out of the country, he would be safe, as there were then no engagements for giving up criminals, so the ports were watched. an easier thing to do when there was not such a tremendous outflow of emigration as now.

To the Honorable Judge of Probate for the County of Penobscot.

The undersigned, administratrix of the estate of Edwin D. Morton, late of Newburgh, in said County, deceased, respectfully represents that the goods and chattels, rights and credits of said deceased are not sufficient to pay his just debts and charges of administration.

Wherefore your petitioner prays your Honor to grant her power to sell by license at public or private sale, and convey the whole of the following described real estate of the deceased (including the reversion of the widow's dower thereon), as the residue would be greatly depreciated by a sale of any portion, viz:

A certain lot or parcel of land situate in said Newburgh and bounded and described as follows, viz: Beginning at the northwest corner of a lot of land in possession of F. O. Rogers; thence southerly to land of Augustus Baker, on the west line of Rogers' lot; thence westerly one-half the distance across lot No. forty-five, according to Gilman's plan of Newburgh; thence northerly through the centre of said lot to the County road; thence easterly on the South line of said County road to the place of beginning; it being the east half of said lot forty-five, and containing forty-five acres, more or less, to satisfy said debts, expenses of sale, and charges of administration.

Said real estate is the same described in a deed recorded in the Registry of Deeds of said County, Vol. 541, page 463.

There is no diseased condition of the system caused by an impure state of the blood that is not benefited by its use. As a tonic for convalescents, ladies in delicate health and old people, it is unsurpassed.
